THE CONFEREES in the Corbett-Jackson case are hard at work.

WE WARN Sarah Grand that if she lectures in this country several men will be sure to be in each of her audiences; and what will she do then, poor thing?

* * *

IT OCCURS to us that Li Hung Chang resembles Louis Napoleon rather more than the Hon. Mr. Bismarck.

THE OLDEST CIVILIZATION is claimed by the Chinese; and they go to war armed with the bow-and-arrow.

* * *

THE GREATEST ROBBERY —Holding up the United States for the benefit of a few senatorial sugar speculators.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY respectfully informs Robert Ingersoll that it thinks it has the right to commit suicide too.

* * *

WILL ROBERT BURDETTE, who has been pronounced dead, kindly write up his experiences following the funeral?

* * *

THE RIGHT OF SELF-DEFENSE belongs to governments as to men, and when an anarchist is killed the right is vindicated.

THE BELMONTS and the Vanderbilts are collecting menageries, and Waldorf Astor of London is the sole owner of a great white elephant.

* * *

A NEGRO MOB in West Virginia having lynched a white man, several able editorials on the condition of the south are unavoidably omitted.

* * *

A TARIFF LAW by four Democratic senators! The country and the Democratic party held up by a quartette of servants of the sugar trust! That is not stupidity. It is knavery.

* * *

A CLERGYMAN at Sedalia, Missouri, has been expelled from a Chautauqua circle for umpiring a game of base-ball. His mistakes are not mentioned, but we never did think the clergy were good at that kind of game.

* * *

THEY KILL ASSASSINS in France with neatness and dispatch. We kill them after their crime has been forgotten and after an expense to the people of about a hundred thousand dollars apiece. The rule ought to be, the higher the crime the quicker the retribution. They do these things very well in France.

SHOCKING.

AUNT MIRANDA—"Them sassiety folks scandalized me so thet I couldn't stop no longer. Why, in the mornin' the women show one-half themselves at the beach, an' then they show down to where they left off, in the evenin'."

THE SULPHUR BUSINESS.

SOME CAPITALISTS propose to buy the volcano of Popocatepetl and mine its sulphur and ship it to the United States "What next?" inquires the Florida Times-Union. Well, it's hard to tell. Since sheol has been abolished by the theologians, it may be necessary to run across and take possession of Vesuvius.

DEATH AND HARD TIMES.

THERE IS NOT so much dying now, according to a Massachusetts undertaker, because the people can't afford the requisite funeral expenses. On the other hand, Colonel Ingersoll talks eloquently in behalf of the right of suicide; so that the death record at the end of the year will be about the same as heretofore, regardless of the tariff.

GOVERNMENTS AND GAMBLERS.

ROSEBERY has entered three horses for the derby of 'ninety-six. The man's fate is marked out. He will get down to his last dollar and then gamble away the British government. The voters of this country did about the same thing with their possessions in 'ninety-two, but they'll recover shortly after the star of Rosebery goes down.

NO FREE VILLAINY.

HILL'S BILL to keep out and expel anarchists may be an attack on free speech; but so is the suppression of vocal filth in polite assemblages, and so is the arrest of loafers who disturb pulpits and congregations. There is a kind of free speech that is intolerable, and there are men in prison who have no more right to freedom than an epidemic.

ON THE REMOVAL OF GARMENTS.

"TAKE OFF YOUR COATS!" says Governor Flower to the Democrats. Frequently that operation is a preliminary to getting whipped. Mr. Li Hung Chang took off his yellow jacket and has encountered calamity ever since. And J. Sloat Fassett says in his Elmira Advertiser, in effect, "Don't you do it. I did it once, and I shall never hear the last of it."

SMALL WOMAN, GREAT SUBJECT.

MRS. LEASE talks of "The millennium, how and when." The weaker the vessel the more it thinks it can hold. Few men would try to solve that problem for large money. Farmer Ingalls, with all his confidence and assertiveness, would rather raise potatoes at a nickel a bushel. A graduate of Vassar contemplates a lecture on how to take the rocks of Gibraltar; but here is a woman John and a new apocalypse.

ROBBED AND BETRAYED.

EVERY DEMOCRAT who voted for that tariff is ashamed of it and apologizes for it. The country is afraid of it and ashamed of the perfidy and dishonor of which it was begotten. It is a hideous monstrosity, without principle and representing no party or organization with the exception of the four Democratic senators whose action in its behalf was the essence of corruption and higher villainy. The country was robbed during its contemplation, and is betrayed and humiliated by its consummation. It will be a long time before the Democratic party has a chance to exercise its vicious authority again.

WHY SHOULD MR. MORTON RUN?

HASN'T LEVI P. MORTON had political honors enough? He is a fine man and deservedly popular; but are there not men equally good who, not being millionaires, have been often enough thrust aside to make room for him? If he were to be elected would he be a good man to lead the party in the national campaign, supposing the honor of leadership did not go to Ohio or Maine or Indiana? Mr. Morton is not young. He is not as great a man as several Republicans of this state who would like to be governor and who have won the honor. Can the Republican party afford to have it charged, with some evidence of truth, that it respects large money more than it respects large brains? Think of this, delegates to Saratoga. This is a mighty good year not to make any bad mistake.

REVEREND MOAKLEY MCKOON ON LYNCHING.

"BREDDREN, I bring yo' good news frum de souf. Three cullud men convicted ob murder has escaped lynchin'. De promp'ness an' perspicacity wid which de cullud man has been interduced into de mystic henceforth is appalling to de uncultivated mind. It has been neck or nothin' wid us eber since de prancipation moculation. Not eben de obscenities ob good society has been observed toward us. We has been jerked wid a free an' liberal han'. Jestice would not stretch a point, but stretched us. Now we see de ebenin' ob hope risin' on de dawn ob despair. Three cullud men escaped lynchin'"——

"How did dem coons escape?" asked Deacon Dinkwater.

"Dey escaped lynchin' bekase dey was hung by due abscess ob law by de sheriff. Pour some water down dat niggah's back what's a-snorin', and den take up de collecshun."

ON THE BRAIN.

A FEARFUL TEST.

"THAT was a terrible test of sincerity," said Dawson. "Mrs. Barber showed her daughter's graduation essay to the editor of the Clarion at the Mountain house. He said it was wonderfully clever, and then, when he'd gone back to work, she sent it to the Clarion for publication."

"GETTING A LIVING BY FOWL MEANS."

Sydney Melbourne—"Worse than that. A regular frost."

Flossy—"I hate whiskers."

Bessy—"I wouldn't marry a man with whiskers; no, not even if he asked me."

"MAMMA, what does g. a. r. mean? Those old men have it on their hats."

"Grand army remnants, dear."

SHE was going to the dentist's to have a tooth pulled. The dirt and cinders from the street blew a hurricane into their faces.

"Oh, dear!" she said, "my eyes are full and so is my heart."

"Helena!"
"Come to my arms."

And this is how they met.

THE ABOLITION OF THE KISS.

[In a certain town in New Jersey the board of health proposes to abolish kissing, to prevent the spread of disease.]

THE pretty girls of Kissville are sad enough to-day.
What now to them is spring-time or the bounding tides of May,
The sweet notes of the song-birds or the summer's dream of bliss,
If cold and ruthless science shall obliterate the kiss?

The town might lose its beauty by hideous clouds of smoke,
Its government be captured by a boss's master-stroke,
The parks might go to ruin and gay parties cease a space,
And yet the girls could laugh and smiles would wreathe each pretty face.

The cause of education might suffer sore defeat,
The pews in all the churches show many an empty seat,
And all woes might be suffered were they anything but this
Which robs them and their lovers of the sweet nectareous kiss.

That storm which fell in Boston from the taxes put on tea
Was a very righteous rumpus, as all histories agree;
But what is choicest Oolong, which a thirsty people sips,
To the tingling touch or lightning of the osculating lips?

No sweet New Jersey maiden—blushing blonde or keen brunette—
Is going back on kisses, you can confidently bet;
And if any rules ascetic in a health board gather sway
'Twill be healthier for that board to get pretty far away.

If Adam kissed in Eden, as we verily believe,
Without the least compunction the luscious lips of Eve,
Was there anything more contagious or more dreadful there than this,
That he gave to all the world the sweet contagion of a kiss?

And, after all your science, pray tell us why disease
Shouldn't sweep us all away when there's nothing left to please?
The Jersey girls are right who think no cyclone ought to miss
The rulers of a town who try to ostracize the kiss.

No; let the sun cease shining, let the grass refuse to grow;
Niagara cease to pour its foaming water down below;
Let everything one longs for—almost—be the one he misses,
But never—oh, no never—ostracize New Jersey kisses!

JOEL BENTON.

"DO YOU believe in the co-education of the sexes?" was asked of a Yale undergraduate.

"I can't say that I do," was the reply. "Girls take to rowing pretty well, but you can see for yourself that they wouldn't be of much good on a base-ball nine or a foot-ball team."

COULDN'T STAND PROSPERITY.

PARSON JOHNSON—"You look worried, Sister Ruth. I trust yo' hab nothin' on youah mind."
SISTER RUTH—"Dat's jes' it, pahson. Got mah house-cleanin' all done, hens layin' good, ole man got a job, an' seben dollars in mah stockin'. Hain't got nuffin' 't all to worry 'bout, an' I'se puffec'ly misabul."

ONE CHILD'S FANCIES.

SHE thought that all cats were infant dogs.

She thought that only good people were allowed to die.

She thought that the furry ends of long grass turned into caterpillars.

She thought, when the clergyman raised the plate above his head after the offering, that God reached down and took the money up to heaven and afterward gave it round to the poor.

A SURE WINNER.

MRS. JOHNSON—"Yo' hab t' hustle now, man. Dat onery Mrs. Jackson's husban' hab jes' got a job as Pullman porter an' gwine t' buy a house an' lot."

MR. JOHNSON—"Cahm yo'self, Lobelia. I jes' been 'lected gran' master an' hanger-on-t'-de-treasury ob de brudderhood ob Pullman porters. I'll order a strike right away an' Jackson will hab t' move into a tenement."

WELL DRESSED.

"WHO is the best-dressed man in the fifty-third congress?"

"Breckinridge."

"Why?"

"Because his spring suit cost fifteen thousand dollars."

SENTENCES PASSED BY THE JUDGE.

WHEN its skies are serene the soul has little favor to ask of the weather-bureau.

There is nothing godly in the cleanliness that flips my neighbor's sweepings into my yard.

Life is to each according to the square of his mentality; but even an angel, with the advantage of distance and clear vision, could not get more than a bird's-eye view of the world and a glimpse of the universe.

Nature is the most determined of her sex and is not easily turned aside from her course. Emergencies are met with expediencies, she has a thousand precautions for every possible mishap, and if you hope by your arts to outwit her in her simple savagery the chances are that without malice or suspicion she will redouble her efforts and, deviating only to accomplish her purpose, will triumph in spite of you.

SHE—"Why do all these men surround me like this? Can it be?"

(But a few moments afterward, when she vacated her chair and all made a rush for it, she again relapsed into blasted hopes.)

THE FABLE OF THE KING AND THE SEER.

THE rude old king, blunt and heavy of thought and deed, sat solidly upon his horse and regarded a figure that stood before him. The steel-clad cavalcade behind him had drawn rein as the king halted, but their curveting horses made a noise of clanking metal that was music to a warrior's ears. A knight who rode beside the king whispered a word into his ear and the king nodded.

"So?" he said presently; "a prophet, a seer?" and he fell into silent musing. Suddenly a great light shone from the king's face, his eye twinkled, his bosom heaved, he said, "Seer, see 'ere," and then he paused and waited.

The courtier at the king's side gave a nervous start, threw a hasty glance at his monarch, shrewdly measured his manner of timid expectancy, and then he smote his breast-plate again and again and laughed with mighty fervor.

With huge delight the king motioned for silence. He turned to the prophet again. "Seer," he said, "s'ere." The prophet stood silent and the king's brow grew dark, notwithstanding that the knight beside him was rolling in his saddle.

The prophet awaited permission to speak. His face was unchanged. The king's face grew blacker and blacker. His neck swelled. Suddenly the outburst came. "S'ere, seer," he bellowed; "if you can't seer joke like that how can I take your second sight seeriously? Ha, by my halidom! S'death! geedap!" And in a second more the hapless prophet had expired under the crushing hoofs of the king's horse.

HARD LUCK.

THIRSTY IKE—"Talk about hard luck—I went an' filled meself ter th' brim wid spring-water dis mornin' an' five minutes after a man offered me all de beer I could drink."

READ IT IN HER EYES.

IT WAS one of those soft, witching moonlight nights when there is a big business done in Cupid's confessional.

"Until I met you, Adele," he murmured in a voice husky with emotion, "I believed that all women were deceitful; but when I look into your clear, beautiful eyes I behold there the very soul of candor and loyalty."

"George," she exclaimed with enthusiasm, "this is the happiest moment I have known since papa took me to that Paris oculist."

"Paris oculist!"

"Yes, dear; you never would have known that my left eye is a glass one."

Then the moon went under a cloud and George rolled over and buried his face in the moist grass.

WHEN THE CRICKETS SING.

ABOUT the time the oats are laid in swaths across the lot
An' dust is on the golden-rod an' smoke hangs round the hills,
The evenin'-time is gittin' cool while noons are still an' hot,
An' corn is fairly silkin' out an' barley slowly fills,
Ol' Natur tunes her orchestra, when dews begin tew fall,
Of locusts under maple-leaves an' crickets everywhere,
Till all out-doors is one sweet song 'at seems tew rise an' fall
Until a feller smiles tew think he ever had a care.

He walked up the Rialto, on the west of Herald square,
Looking horsey from his shoe-tips to his glossy, oily hair.
He had stripes across his shirt-front and big dots upon his vest;
A straw hat like a buzz-saw and a watch-chain from the west.
His eyes were elevated with a supercilious stare,
And his diamonds they quite rivaled the summer sun's fierce glare.
He cares naught for strikes or tariff, is never known to fret,
For he has a job as husband to a popular soubrette.—New York Herald.

"THE NEW CAPITOL."

No illustrated paper in this country ever grew more rapidly in public favor than has JUDGE in the last few years. It is also true that it has grown on its merits. Its political cartoons are among the best published in America. Mr. Gillam, JUDGE's chief artist, certainly has few real rivals as a cartoonist. The Inter-Ocean has reproduced several of his cartoons, and reproduces from JUDGE one to-day that deserves high praise. The artist calls it "The New Capitol." The great Grover bestrides the building, covering with his enlarged and swelling person both the senate and the house ends, while his head, with a lock of hair elevated like a flag-pole, takes the place of the goddess of liberty. The Democratic senators are gathered around in groups, while Gorman reads aloud the inscription, which is placarded in large letters—"I am all there is of the government—i. e., president, senate and the house.—Grover Cleveland." No better illustration of the present condition at Washington has been made by pen or pencil. The likenesses of the senators and the would-be usurper are excellent. In black and white, as reproduced in the Inter-Ocean, much of the effectiveness of the picture is lost. It is only in colors, as originally produced in JUDGE, that it can be seen at its best.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The proof-reader sat ill at ease.
He murmured, "What sorrows are these!
Most tongues I have read,
Both modern and dead,
And now I must study Chinese."

WHEN JIMMY COMES FROM SCHOOL.

When Jimmy comes from school at four,
J-e-r-u-s-a-l-e-m! how things begin
To whirl and buzz and bang and spin
And brighten up from roof to floor!
The dog that all day long has lain
Upon the back porch wags his tail
And leaps and barks and begs again
The last scrap in the dinner-pail,
When Jimmy comes from school.

The cupboard latches clink a tune,
And mother from her knitting stirs
To tell that hungry boy of hers
That supper will be ready soon;
And then a slab of pie he takes,
A cooky and a quince or two,
And for the breezy barn-yard breaks,
Where everything cries, "How d'y do?"
When Jimmy comes from school.

The rooster on the garden-fence
Struts up and down and crows and crows
As if he knows, or thinks he knows,
He, too, is of some consequence.
The guineas join the chorus too,
And just beside the window-sill
The red-bird, swinging out of view,
On his light perch begins to trill,
When Jimmy comes from school.

When Jimmy comes from school take care!
Our hearts begin to throb and quake
With life and joy, and every ache
Is gone before we are aware.
The earth takes on a richer hue,
A softer light falls on the flowers,
And overhead a brighter blue
Seems bent above this world of ours,
When Jimmy comes from school.
